Chautauqua Speaker to Tell Of Pork Barrel Legislation

The congressman whose job is most secure is the one who succeeds in robbing another district to provide his own with plenty and more than enough to spare." The man who makes these statements is Lee Francis Lybarger, a member of the Philadelphia bar and one of the best informed men in the country on the tariff and other questions of national scope.

Mr. Lybarger is coming here to make the keynote speech at the Chautauqua, and the management announces that he has an assigned subject. Mr. Loring J. Whiteside, general manager of the Community Chautauquas in New York city, writes of Lybarger as follows:

"I wanted a man to go over the Chautauqua circuit," Mr. Whiteside says, "who could present the question of pork barrel legislation to the thousands of Chautauqua patrons that can be reached in a single season. Millions of dollars, the rightful property of American citizens, is wasted each year by our methods of government expenditure. It is as important an issue as we have today. It is a matter that affects vitally the interests of every man, woman and child, and I have wanted to have it presented to the people in a way that they could understand and by a man able to present the facts as they actually are. Mr. Lybarger is the best man in the country for this work. He has shown a marvelous grasp of great governmental issues and has demonstrated an extraordinary ability at presenting subjects of this kind to the people clearly and in a way that makes difficult problems easily understood. He will speak on the opening day of the Chautauqua, and his speech will be the keynote address of the entire ten ses-days of delightful entertainment, and this is one of our purpose numbers." "The tendency is for one section to rob another," Mr. Lybarger says. "In certain forms of government expenditure a small minority is laying violent hands upon the federal treasury. For example, in the matter of pensions, we have instances of cemetery records being ransacked so women to whom dead soldiers had never been married or whom they never had seen might draw pensions as their widows.

No Occasion for Any Panic, New York's Mayor Says

New York, July 13 .- That the germ of infantile paralysis had finally been disovered by a New York physician was asserted yesterday at the offices of the board of health. The name of the phy sician was withheld, but it was officially stated that after discovering the germ the physician had been able to develop ome virulent "cultures" of the disease.

Mayor Mitchell and representative physicians of the city, including the members of the advisory board of the health department, held a conference yesterday to ascertain whether any further steps could be taken to check the epi The meeting brought into con sultation the most experienced medical talent in the city, comprising senior practitioners with wide experience in children's diseases and epidemics, togeth er with outside experts. The mayor will transmit to his department chiefs any orders that may be recommended by the

The American Red Cross sent a representative to the hall prior to the conference for the purpose of extending to the mayor and the health commissioner the assurances that at any time the services of the Red Cross were deemed necessary they would gladly be extended.

The spread of the disease is generally around the centers in South Brooklyn and the lower East Side of Manhattan, where the epidemic has flourished since its development early in June. Some cases, however, have been discovered in the other sections of Brooklyn and a few in the upper residential districts of Man-

The mayor stated that the city has acilities sufficient to handle all the cases thus far reported, and that there are in the hospitals 400 more beds available for patients, while there are plenty of ambulances and nurses. Should the present facilities become overtaxed provision has been made to make use of the hospitals at the Ellis Island immigration station.

Warnings against a panic were issued by the mayor and by the health commisprinted a letter to the editor from sioner. The latter said the fatalities Charles M. I thought he seemed rather lonely. He told me that Hoppin had called upon him not long before. He said that he looked well and seemed to be in good health. but he noticed that when he went out he was a little awkward in getting down the front steps. When I left Lowell came to the door with me and stood there, evidently waiting to see how I negotiated the front steps. At the age at which I then was there was no reason why there should be anything the matter with my action. It is generally conceded that the ship-ping bill will pass and the function of Republican senators now changes from that of wholesale and unalterated opposition to an attempt to amend the bill in accordance with Republican principles. During the last few weeks administration leaders have carefully canvassed the situation in the Senate and have apparently concluded that the somewhat altered ship purchase bill can secure enough votes to insure its passage.

As the fight on the shipping bill appears to-day, it will be a three-cornered affair. On the one side will be the Democrats blindly for the bill. On another side will be the stalwart Republican opposition, opposing the bill on the ground that it does not give private capital any opportunities. A STORY OF HUNGARY

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

The map of Europe has been changing ever since there has been any historical record. There have been times when changes have been expected that bave not occurred. One thing is noticeable-no nation in Europe has thrown off a foreign yoke.

Sixty years ago Hungary was in position of antagonism to Austria. Louis Kossuth came to the United States, which was in those days the mecca of all peoples who desired to be made free, to raise funds to prosecute a revolution against the other wing of the dual empire. He was treated liberally by the freedom loving American people and returned to Hungary. What became of the money raised at that time I do not know. What everybody does know is that Hungary is still a part of the empire of Austria-Hungary.

I am of Hungarian parentage, but I was born in America. My father was in sympathy with the movement to achieve independence for his fatherland and was a member of a revolutionary society organized for that purpose. This story which I am about to relate he told me when I was a boy. "The society to which I belonged, he said, "was organized for the pur pose of bringing about a rising of the Hungarian people against the Austrian government. Of course we were a se cret body. I determined to learn the plans of the government concerning Hungary, and to do this I offered my services to the prime minister as a spy on the revolutionists, revealing to him that I was a member of a circle whose object was to achieve the independence of Hungary, and I had joined the society with a view to obtaining their I succeeded in winning the minister's confidence and anticipated getting much valuable information. "The danger in all this was that unless I made known to the circle my intentions I was likely to be considered a traiter to them. If I told them what was doing I was liable to run against some one among them who was en deavoring to accomplish for the gov ernment what I was desirous of doing for the circle. If so I would be im mediately arrested and shot by the government. "I concluded to place in the hands of one member of the circle-Shimsky was his name-evidence to prove that I was working in the interest of Hungary, but charged him not to produce it till I should call upon him to do so. Indeed, it consisted of papers in a sealed package the nature of which he did not know. He and I had long been friends, and I felt sure that he was true to Hungary.

"Through the prime minister I learned just what provision had been made by the government to suppress any rising on the part of Hungary and, more than this, what prominent Hungarians were playing false to the Hungarian cause, Then suddenly I met with a misfortune. Shimsky was arrested as a plotter against the Austrian governmen And a second misfortune followed immediately. A few days after Shimsky's arrest our society held a meeting. and I was not only accused of being formation that had caused his arrest.

"It happened that another member of the circle was playing the same game I was playing. One Raminye, while pretending to be working in the interest of the government, had learned that I was in the confidence of the prime minister. Raminye at once reported the matter to the society. They constituted themselves a court to examine into the charge.

"The evidence of my true position had been given only to Shimsky, and he had been arrested and his papers confiscated. If he had placed mine with the others I was surely lost. I could not convince the circle that I was true to them, and the government would have conclusive proof that I had been a spy on their movements. If I escaped the circle I would fall by the government.

"All I could say to the circle was that I had deposited proofs of my loyalty to Hungary with Shimsky. If the gov ernment was not in possession of them and they could be found, I was saved. If not, the government would put me out of the way.

"The circle at once considered what they had better do, but I was not permitted to hear their deliberations They decided that there was a strong probability that the government had the papers I had deposited with Shimsky, that I would be arrested and my arrest would be very dangerous to the society. I was called into the room where the deliberations had taken place and handed a sum of money which I was told I was to use in immediate flight.

"I left the meeting within ten minutes of receiving this command and, in disguise, made my way into Italy, There I felt comparatively safe, but Austria then held northern Italy, and until I had left that country I was not sure of immunity from arrest. I was bound for America and learned when I reached this country that no one ac-
